Join us as former State Assembly and current LA City Councilman Paul Blumenfield and his team come to share the vision for advancing technology and innovation in the City of Los Angeles. From Silicon Beach to the citywide Wi-Fi initiative, the Councilman is aggressively leading the charge to make Los Angeles the leader in advanced technology.

Did you know that the City of Los Angeles has an Innovation and Technology Agency? Find out what it is and what it does. Find out how the agency promotes innovation and development of technology for the private and public sectors in LA, and how policy is shaped to bring technology investment and jobs to our city. Find out how partnerships are formed and decisions are made which have strategic implications for all of us.

Among other initiatives, Councilman Blumenfield and his team are responsible for the citywide Wi-Fi initiative that seeks through private/public partnerships to provide Wi-Fi access to the residents of Los Angeles. The LA Community Broadband Network will be the largest municipal broadband network in the nation and will benefit a community that still has nearly a third of its residents without Internet access.

Councilmember Bob Blumenfield was elected to the Los Angeles City Council in March, 2013. He represents the 3rd Council District, which spans the northwest portion of Los Angeles in the San Fernando Valley, including the communities of Canoga Park, Reseda, Tarzana, Winnetka and Woodland Hills. He chairs the city's Innovation and Technology agency where policy is formed for bringing innovation and jobs to the city.

Prior to his election to the City Council, Bob served in the California State Assembly from 2008 – 2013 working for all of the San Fernando Valley communities he continues to represent.

Bob is a graduate of Duke University and the UCLA Anderson School of Management Business Executive Program. He lives in Woodland Hills with his wife, Kafi, and their two children.
